Full editorial board listing overleaf

Global Public Health is a distinctive, new peer-review journal that will energetically engage with key public health issues in the global context – mounting inequalities between rich and poor; the globalization of trade; new patterns of travel and migration; epidemics of newly-emerging and re-emerging infectious diseases; the increase in chronic illnesses; escalating pressure on public health infrastructures around the world; and the growing range of conflict situations and environmental threats.

Directed and supported by a leading international board of experts, the journal will be broad-based and wide-ranging, including work that draws on the environmental health sciences; epidemiology; health policy and management; and the social sciences as applied to public health and medicine. It will be characterized, and distinguished from other journals currently available in the field by its:

- global and multidisciplinary focus;
- emphasis on significant international health issues, including their social and cultural dimensions as appropriate;
- concern to understand resource-poor and resource-rich countries, and the public health challenges they face, as part of a single, interacting global system.

Special subscription rates will be available for developing countries. Full subscription information available soon at:

Themes

The journal will aim to become the lead environment internationally for the publication of papers adopting a global focus with respect to:

Social patterning of health, including social exclusion, health disparities and inequalities.

Environmental health sciences, including natural catastrophes, disasters, famine, pollution, ecotoxicology and environmental threats.

Population and health, including sexual and reproductive health, indigenous health and the health of minorities.

Conflict and health, including torture, war, terrorism, civil disturbance and the health of displaced populations.

International health policy and practice, including social justice, human rights and health; the role of international agencies, governments and civil society.

Global health and development, including the health effects of major development trends and the impact of globalization on health outcomes.
